

Daniel Rizzo is currently a human resources consultant based in Savannah, GA. Dan's love of working with people led him to a career in human resources. His experience encompasses 25 years in New York City where he held various human resources leadership roles in the fashion and media industries, most recently David Yurman, Reed Krakoff and Carolina Herrera.

Dan's roles focused on developing HR functions, including organizational development, employee relations and leadership coaching. Today, Dan's purpose and passion lies in executive coaching where he can help senior leaders reach their fullest potential.

After nearly 35 years in New York, Dan relocated to Savannah with his husband in 2016. They've spent the last few years renovating a home in the Victorian District, completing much of the work themselves.