

Phyllis Monahan is a dedicated educator whose lifelong passion centers around nurturing, empowering, and enlightening young minds to unlock their boundless potential. With a rich background in teaching, Phyllis has made a profound impact in both New Jersey and Savannah, GA.

In New Jersey, she embarked on her teaching journey in a private school, imparting knowledge to elementary students, and later transitioned to a public school, where she continued to make a difference as a middle school teacher. Seeking new horizons, Phyllis and her husband relocated to Savannah, where she found her niche at the esteemed Savannah Country Day School for an inspiring decade. Later, she brought her expertise to the Savannah College of Art and Design (SCAD) for another remarkable nine-year tenure.

Beyond the classroom, Phyllis has always embraced an active lifestyle, reveling in activities such as aerobics, tennis, yoga, and golf. Her enthusiasm for physical pursuits mirrors her zest for teaching, as she endeavors to instill in her students the values of a well-rounded and fulfilling life.

Family plays an essential role in Phyllis' life, and she cherishes her role as a loving spouse and a proud parent of three grown children. The joy of seven grandchildren, ranging from ages 29 to 8, adds an extra layer of warmth and love to her world. Though her beloved grandchildren reside outside Savannah, they share in her appreciation for the city's beauty and lifestyle.

Phyllis is also deeply committed to giving back to her community. Currently, she actively serves as a board member at the esteemed Savannah Bridge Club, fostering connections and shared passions among fellow members. Additionally, her dedication to the literary world shines through her role on the Savannah Book Festival Volunteer Board, where she contributes to the celebration of knowledge and culture. She is thrilled to bring her talents and passion to the ATC.

In essence, Phyllis Monahan embodies a life dedicated to nurturing young minds, embracing an active lifestyle, cherishing family bonds, and serving her community with enthusiasm and devotion. Her journey is an inspiring testament to the power of education and the joy of making a positive impact on the lives of others.
